N. R. Sarkar, Finance Minister of the Government of West Bengal, began his career as a clerk in the Hindustan Cooperative Insurance Company (HCIC). He obtained this job with the help of an HCIC employee, one Suren Tagore, a relative of the great Indian poet. By trickery and dishonest intrigue, Sarkar rose to become managing director of HCIC. His intrigues resulted in the dismissal of his former benefactor, Tagore, as well as several other associates in HCIC.
